Don Juan is a digressive satire aimed at mocking the traditional characteristics of literary Romanticism and is atypical of Byron's earlier poetry. The structure of the poem's stanzas are written in eight line iambic pentameter, where the final two lines form a couplet and are often used to deliver a comedic punch line.

What a satire. After publishing his first poetry collection "Hours of Idleness", Byron was reportedly already working on a satire about contemporary poets of the time, when he came across a scathing (though not undeservedly so) critique of his collection by the Edinburgh Review.

English Bards and Scotch Reviewers: A Satire (1820) PDF

Inspired by Alexander Pope's Dunciad, Lord Byron, angered by the critical response to his first volume of poems, produces verse characters of most of the literary men of the time. He later expressed reservations about many of these judgments, though the English Bards and Scotch Reviewers quickly achieved a life of its own.

Lord Byron: English Bards and Scotch Reviewers: a Satire.

Don Juan gave him scope to tackle a range of his own concerns; to criticise and ridicule society and attack literary, political and religious figures. Byron once said: "There are but two sentiments to which I am constant" a strong love of liberty, and a detestation of cant" (Countess Blessington, Conversations of Lord Byron, 1834).
